matters of administration and as the trust company is a creditor of the estate she thinks that a new administrator should be appointed.

She says that the trust company has never given her an accounting. She also says that after Mr. McDonald's death the company without cause sold at private sale the collateral for a note made to the company by Mr. Stall for Mr. McDonald. Part of this collateral was 2,000 shares of Standard Oil which Miss Stallo says was sold at $200 a share, whereas the value before the expiration of the renewal period was $1,180. She says that the estate has suffered $2,578,000 damage by the sale of the securities, which, in the opinion of the trust company, were sold at the best obtainable price.
